Here to help you and your child

Why you might want to talk to The Family Support Advisor?

“My child’s behaviour is getting out of hand.”

“I’ve got lots of questions about being a parent but no answers.”

“I’m worried about next week’s parents’ evening.”

“I think my child may have additional needs.”

“I just need someone to talk to.”

“Since my partner left things haven’t been the same.”

“I need support with my child’s transition to secondary school.”

Every child and every family matters

What does a Family Support Advisor do?

My role as Family Support Advisor is to help you and your child to get the very best from school by providing support, advice and information.

I can help you with any worries you may have about your child's behaviour or attendance and provide support on how best to deal with it.

How is this done?

- By working with families to help with issues around their children's behaviour or school attendance.
- By helping families with other parenting issues.
- By working in partnership with families and school to help access any further services a family may need.
- By helping families to ensure that children are getting the most out of school and that they are safe and happy.

What type of support is offered?

- I offer one-to-one support to families in their own homes or at school.
- I listen to families and give confidential support and guidance.
- I offer the opportunity to meet with other parents and carers.
- I provide information about other relevant local services.
- I run parenting groups.
- I run a support group for families with a child with an additional need.
